Letter From the Editors

December 2020

Dear Earthlings,

This year, the Covid-19 pandemic waylaid The Wayfaring Band, keeping us from our typical travels. Like many of you, we adapted by Zooming out. We zoomed so far out that we're writing you now from beyond the Milky Way, in the outer galaxies of our universe! From this distance, the circumstances on Earth at the end of the year 2020 appear clarified. We can see past the storm of pandemic, protests, uncertainty, and isolation. We are struck instead by a portrait of resilience, mutuality, creativity, and humor.

The records and reflections compiled in this publication include activities, memories, conversations, collaborations, and celebrations of our collective efforts to resist loneliness and fear during a time of extreme change and uncertainty. By centering the lived experiences of people with Down syndrome, autism, developmental delays, genetic differences, and other intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD), we aim to capture the vital voices of this community, preserving and uplifting them for future generations of Earthlings.

As an organization, we've spent a lot of time this year reflecting on how isolation is not new to the disability community. People with disabilities have been self-organizing and developing visions for an alternative future since time immemorial. Many of you readers may long for a little of that hard-earned experience in this day and age. If so, we invite you to join our merry band of travelers on our joyful journey. Wherever we wayfare, on Earth or elsewhere, we never go it alone.

We hope you enjoy our zany zine.

Your Extraterrestrial Editors,

The Wayfaring Band

The Wayfaring Band is an adventure where everybody belongs. We are not a rock-and-roll band, but a band of travelers. We offer adventure travel and immersive learning opportunities for adults with and without intellectual and developmental disabilities (I/DD). Our mission is to provide support, build awareness, and foster genuine connection between people with and without I/DD through education, socialization, and transformative travel.

THE QUARANTINE DIARIES: A

From April through September of 2020, staff members from The Wayfaring to check on their well-being and establish deeper relationships. These are a few excerpts

April 20: Kayla

Kayla is doing well and working on some art that she can sell at the gallery. She says business has been good. The food that she receives from the food bank is good quality and she supplements with Instacart orders.

April 27: Jimmy

Jimmy had a great birthday! He loved opening presents in his pajamas, and he had Texas Roadhouse for dinner. He had a big bowl of pasta and meatballs tonight for dinner and is in a great mood.

May 4: George

George called to remind me that it is his birthday and asked that I let everyone know that he is ready for them to start calling him. He's playing video games currently and is ready for Chinese food.

May 12: Roxie

Roxie and I spoke about Mother's Day and what that means for us now. It was her first without her mom, and she didn't really know what to do. I shared with her what my siblings and I do, and that the best thing we can do is pour love out into the world and live big, grand lives. She shared some stories about her mom and then she told me how she wishes that she was closer with her dad. Her apartment building is allowing people to enter now, so she is excited to get help with cleaning and rides to the store. She really wants to get the place in shape so that she can invite Fay over and not make a bad impression.

May 14: Andre

I called Andre this morning regarding some messages he sent the night before. Today he says he is still really stressed out. He got into an argument yesterday with his brother regarding a list Andre made of all the things that are bothering him. His brother was on the list and became really upset, and they got into an argument. Andre says that his brother called him selfish for wanting to only take care of himself. I shared with Andre that self-care is not the same as selfishness, and that there is nothing wrong with setting boundaries. Andre states that he will not practice self-care because it makes people self-absorbed narcissists. He then shared about how his dad did that and is now a terrible person that he doesn't want to look like or act like. Andre says his daily dilemmas are fighting with his mom and her boyfriend, thinking about running away, "ending it all." He had to get off the phone but will call me later.

May 20: Carl

Carl is doing well. He goes on a 30-mile bike ride almost every day. It only takes 3 to 4 hours to complete that distance. He likes to paddleboard and goes to Cherry Creek reservoir. Carl watched his sister's virtual graduation and thought it was really nice.

June 2: Roxie

Roxie feels really grateful to be working with Access Gallery and Easter Seals. Art has been keeping her busy. We talked about the protests and current state of our country. She expressed fear, anger, and sadness. She remembers her mom talking to her about police when she was little. She believes that no one should be above the law, especially cops. She doesn't like the chaos and violence. She mentioned that this has been happening for years and it doesn't feel new to her. She talked about the challenges and fears of being black and disabled.

June 4: Kayla

"As a black disabled woman, I am scared to go outside. Anything can happen at this point." Kayla would love to go out for a walk or just sit in a park. I asked if she would feel safe if she had support from members of her community, and she said yes she would love that. I'm going to reach out and see if there is anyone able and willing to meet with us so she can experience fresh air and feel safe. "I'm tired of staring at these same walls."

June 10: Danny

Danny shared some good news with me. A lot of things are re-opening and he's looking forward to going on a date with Karly. His sisters moved to Seattle because they got a new apartment, and a fire engine was driving past his house.

June 16: Luis

Luis and I watched a western movie called "A Ticket to Tomahawk." We took breaks every 20 minutes to discuss our thoughts. At the beginning of the movie Luis would refer to the natives as "Indians." On one of our breaks I asked if he knew where that term came from, and then we discussed the origins and Christopher Columbus. Luis asked what I like to be called and I told him I prefer Native, Indigenous, or First Nation if someone is referring to me or speaking about the group. By the time the movie ended Luis was referring to the characters as "native." He also shared that he is "American Indian," but after our conversation about origins he said instead he is "Native American and Peruvian."

RECORD OF PHONE CALLS WITH FRIENDS

Band logged hundreds of phone calls with adults with disabilities in our community from our records. All names have been changed to protect the anonymity of participants.

June 19: Andre

Andre called this morning because he was out of groceries and needed support in getting more. I met up with him and took him to Walmart. We talked about his new place. He seems excited to move in but did say that he is really nervous at the thought of living alone. He just finished a rough draft of the story he's been working on. All of the characters have been completed and the artwork associated with them. He gave his "failures" a body and voice. I thought that was pretty intense and deep.

June 26: Marc

Marc is doing well and hanging in there. He moved into a new house with his same host home provider and is still really liking her. To help pass the time they have "planted" vegetables in the backyard. Beets, tomatoes, broccoli... tomatoes are my favorite."

July 6: Roxie

Roxie was dealing with some depression at the beginning of the week. "When I get in those moods I don't want to do nothing or talk to anyone. I just need some space." She was much happier today because she is going with a friend to a 4th of July BBQ. She wants to start getting out more and seeing her friends.

July 13: Carl

Carl is in Omaha, Nebraska right now on his way to visit his Grandma. We talked about his trip to Minneapolis. He said that he visited the memorial for George Floyd "It was really sad and there were a lot of people there. The town looked like it had been blown up. Everything was broken and knocked over."

July 20: Kevin

Kevin is spending a lot of time singing and dancing in his room. He is feeling bored and wishes that more people would answer his phone calls to talk to him. He is excited about the talent show and would like to sing a prayer for everyone.

July 24: Ellie

Ellie called me while she was on a walk. She said since her roommates work from home she's not allowed to be on Facetime in the house. We were talking about being single and missing being in a relationship. "Do all people with disabilities have that in common? Like are they all selfish and not wanting people to go to heaven?" I told her I think that is a human thing and all people probably feel that way. She said "it's hard to be human."

July 28: Ricky

Ricky is excited about being paid for the BIPOC caucus meetings. He says it will really help him out since he hasn't been able to work. He shared with me that he believes he is a prophet. "I can sense and see things that other people miss. Sometimes when people die they visit me, and then I call their families and share that with them for comfort."

August 6: Kevin

Kevin showed me around his room. He has a lot of religious items, and God is very important to him. We spoke about some of our favorite foods. He really likes to put jalapeños on everything. "I make pasta with meat, sauce, and jalapeño. But I wear a mask when I cut the jalapeño because it makes me cough and sneeze. I'm not sick; it's the pepper."

August 10: Mitch

Mitch is doing well. He's working but is nervous that he's going to lose hours in November. "Domino's is changing how they do things. The boxes are going to be premade, and no more labels. Which is what I do for the drivers, so I'm not sure what I'm going to do."

August 20: Ricky

Ricky had his 61st birthday earlier this week, but he feels like a 30 year-old. He was hoping he could go to a bar and play pool with friends to celebrate, but he can't because of the virus. "It sucks."

Virtual Art Salons: During the height of the stay-at-home quarantine in April and May of 2020, The Wayfaring Band learned that many former artists-in-residence who had traveled with the band in the past were suddenly out of work or underemployed. At the same time, adults with /IDD in our community were isolating at home, many with an overabundance of unstructured time available. Mutual aid to the rescue! The Wayfaring Band employed some of the artists in our community to lead virtual studio tours, art classes, and creative performances on Zoom and then made those programs available for free to anyone in need of a creative outlet.

"It actually isn't all on me. My family is a lot more flexible than I thought they were."

Caregiving in Quarantine:
A Facilitated Conversation Between
Parents of Adults with Disabilities
July 8, 2020

"We can't wait for systems to support us. We have to do it ourselves."

"I want my son to see his friends, but we can't afford for him to bring sickness into the house. It's an impossible choice."

"I was tired when the pandemic started. Now, I'm even more so."

"What can we count on?"

The whole system is built on shaky ground.

"IT'S A HOUSE OF CARDS."

"There's such a loss of independence. But then again, my daughter is texting, zooming, managing herself better than I expected."

"COVID has exposed how hard it is for me to die."

"Who will take care of my child if I get sick?"

On May 25, 2020, George Floyd, a 46-year-old Black man, was killed in Minneapolis, Minnesota while being arrested for allegedly using a counterfeit bill. In the weeks that followed, protests in support of Black lives and against police brutality erupted around the world.

The Wayfaring Band

@vibrant_visuals

During the Summer of 2020, people were protesting around the world in support of Black lives and against police brutality

The Wayfaring Band wondered

"How are the Black, Indigenous, & other People of Color in our community being affected?"

How do RACE & DISABILITY intersect?

So The Wayfaring Band formed a discussion group of people with and without intellectual and developmental disabilities to learn more

Within our local community, we wondered how Black, Indigenous, and other People of Color (BIPOC) with and without disabilities were being affected. On June 8th, we offered a facilitated conversation about anti-racism on Zoom, and we invited band members who had shared questions and concerns about the protests to join the conversation. We also reached out to our roadies, the seasonal staff members who deliver our programs when we're traveling, and invited any of them who were interested to attend the conversation.

After that initial discussion, it was clear that many BIPOC members of our community were craving a safe space to explore their thoughts, feelings, and experiences among other people of color. To meet that need, The Wayfaring Band formed a neurodiverse BIPOC caucus, which met weekly for nine weeks through July and August.

The Wayfaring Band

Neurodiverse BIPOC Caucus

For the final three sessions of the discussion group, the caucus members were joined by a graphic recorder named Jayda Shuavarnasri (@vibrant_visuals on Instagram). Jayda bore witness to their conversations and recorded the highlights, designing a poster in four parts. The poster poses three essential questions:

- How has racism harmed me?
- What does belonging mean to me?
- How can you help?

People with disabilities make up a third to half of all people killed by law enforcement officers. Disabled people of color, in particular Black and Native people with disabilities, experience the highest risk.

HOW CAN YOU HELP?

Graphic by @vivant-visuals

We invite readers to spend some time reflecting on the suggestions outlined in this final panel. We all play a role in dismantling white supremacy culture and embodying anti-racist ideals.

Hey friends of the merry hearts,

You are friends to the voiceless
a home to the outcast
sound to the speaker

You gave me
the chance to be ready to stand on my own ground

I gave you
a badass
to have on the bus

You meet us
where we need to be met

You have the strength
to change
things that matter

No matter what happens in life
you are needed

Thank you for helping the loving hearts
that have been forgotten

This world needs you
to stay strong
to stay at peace
